PREFACE.

There is something in the very name of FRIEND that quickens the pulse and warms the heart. The most beautiful relationship in human intercourse is friendship, and it is at once the easiest and most difficult of attainment. In friendship's name much is endured, much attempted and many sacrifices are made, and the greatest happiness is gained. Friends may come and go with the passing years, but the sweet memory of friendship's happy hour remains.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

DELIBERATE long before thou consecrate a friend; and when thy impartial judgment concludes him worthy of thy bosom, receive him joyfully and entertain him wisely; impart thy secrets boldly, and mingle thy thought with his; he is thy very self; and use him so. If thou firmly believe him faithful, thou makest him so.—Quarles.

IN the hours of distress and misery, the eyes of every mortal turn to friendship. In the hour of gladness and conviviality, what is your want? It is friendship. When the heart overflows with gratitude, or with any other sweet and sacred sentiment, what is the word to which it would give utterance? A Friend. —Landor.

A MAN'S best female friend is a wife of good sense and good heart, whom he loves, and who loves him. If he have that, he need not seek elsewhere. But supposing the man be without such a helpmate, female friendship he must have, or his intellect will be without a garden, and there will be many an unheeded gap even in its strongest fence. —Lytton.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

AFTER friendship it is confidence; before friendship it is judgment. —Seneca.

A FRIEND is a person before whom I may be sincere. Before him I may think aloud. —Emerson.

A FAITHFUL friend is the true image of the Deity. —Napoleon.

A FRIEND cannot be known in prosperity, and an enemy cannot be hidden in adversity.

True friends visit us in prosperity only when invited, but in adversity they come without invitation.

A FRIEND may be often found and lost, but an old friend can never be found, and nature has provided that he cannot be easily lost. —Jonson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

A FRIEND is he who sets his heart upon us, is happy with us, and delights in us; and does for us what we want, is willing and fully engaged to do all he can for us, on whom we can rely in all cases.

—Channing.

A FRIENDSHIP will be young after the lapse of half a century; a passion is old at the end of three months.

AH, were I sever'd from thy side,
Where were thy friend, and who my guide?
Years have not seen—Time shall not see
The hour that tears my soul from thee.

—Byron.

ALTHOUGH a friend may remain faithful in misfortune, yet none but the very best and loftiest will remain faithful to us after our errors and our sins.

—Farrar.

FRIENDSHIP is the greatest bond in the world.

—Taylor.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

A MAN should not repudiate the friendship of a woman because it may lead to harm; he should cherish the friendship and beware of the harm. —Alger.

A MAN'S reputation is what his friends say about him. His character is what his enemies say about him. —Unknown.

A SLENDER acquaintance with the world must convince every man that actions, not words, are the true criterion of the attachment of friends, and that the most liberal profession of good will is very far from being the surest mark of it. —Washington.

A WOMAN, if she really be your friend, will have a sensitive regard for your character, honor, repute. She will seldom counsel you to do a shabby thing, for a woman friend desires to be proud of you. At the same time her constitutional timidity makes her more cautious than your male friend. She therefore seldom counsels you to do an imprudent thing. —Lytton.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

A TRUE test of friendship: to sit or walk with a friend for an hour in perfect silence without wearying of one another's company.

—Mulock.

ALWAYS leave my friend something more to be desired of me. Be useful to my friend, as far as he permits, and no further. Be much occupied with my own affairs, and little, very little, with those of my friend. Leave my friend always at liberty to think and act for himself, especially in matters of little importance —Gold Dust.

AND thou, my friend, whose gentle love
Yet thrills my bosom's chords,
How much thy friendship was above
Description's power of words!

—Byron.

AS o'er the glacier's frozen sheet
Breathes soft the Alpine rose,
So, through life's desert springing sweet,
The flower of friendship grows.

—Holmes.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

A FAITHFUL friend, best boon of Heaven,
Unto some favored mortal given;
Though still the same, yet varying still,
Our each successive wants to fill,
Whatever form his presence wears
That presence every form endears.

—Williams.

AS people grow older friends and associates of youth are apt to be more appreciated, and old relations are oftentimes resumed that have been suffered to languish for many years.

These links with the past form a chain that, next to the ties of blood, forms one of the strongest relations of social life.

Although pessimists declare that friendship is a myth and what are called intimates are people who consort together for amusement or self-interest, the very fact that there is this feeling of especial kindness for old time associates proves that there is such a thing as sentiment independent of worldly considerations.

—Unknown.

EVERY friend is to the other a sun and a sunflower also. He attracts and follows.

—Richter.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

I WANT a warm and faithful friend,
To cheer the adverse hour;
Who ne'er to flatter will descend,
Nor bend the knee to power.
A friend to chide me when I'm wrong,
My inmost soul to see;
And that my friendship prove as strong
To him as his to me.

—Adams.

FRIENDSHIP is an allay of our sorrows, the ease of our passions, the discharge of our oppressions, the sanctuary to our calamities, the counsellor of our doubts, the charity of our minds, the emission of our thoughts, the exercise and improvement of what we meditate.

—Taylor.

BEWARE lest thy friend learn to tolerate one frailty of thine, and so an obstacle be raised to the progress of thy love.

—Thoreau.

BE slow in choosing a friend, slower in changing.

—Franklin.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

IT is not becoming to turn from friends in adversity, but then it is for those who have basked in the sunshine of their prosperity to adhere to them. No one was ever so foolish as to select the unfortunate for their friends.
—Lucanus.

CONSULT your friend on all things, especially on those which concern yourself; his counsel may then be useful, where your own self-love might impair your judgment.
—Seneca.

CONSTANT and solid, whom no storms can shake,
Nor death unfix, a right friend ought to be;
And if condemned to survive, doth make
No second choice, but grief and memory.
But friendship's best fate is, when it can spend
A life, a fortune, all to serve a friend.
—Philips.

FRIENDSHIPS are discovered rather than made.
—Stowe.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

COMMEND me to the friend that comes
When I am sad and lone,
And makes the anguish of my heart
The suffering of his own;
Who calmly shuns the glittering throng
At pleasure's gay levee,
And comes to gild a sombre hour,
And gives his heart to me.

Commend me to that generous heart
Which, like the pine on high,
Uplifts the same unvarying brow
To every change of sky;
Whose friendship does not fade away
When wintry tempests blow,
But like the winter's icy crown,
Looks greener through the snow.

He flits not with the flitting stork
That seeks a southern sky,
But lingers where the wounded bird
Hath laid him down to die.
Oh, such a friend he is in truth,
Whate'er his lot may be,
A rainbow on the storm of life,
An anchor on its sea.

—Anon.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

CHOOSE your friend wisely,
Test your friend well,
True friends, like rarest gems,
Prove hard to tell.
Winter him, summer him,
Know your friend well.

—Unknown.

DEAR to me is a friend, yet I can also make use of an enemy; the friend shows me what I can do, the foe teaches me what I should.

—Schiller.

DON'T flatter yourself that friendship authorizes you to say disagreeable things to your intimates. The nearer you come into relation with a person, the more necessary do tact and courtesy become. Except in cases of necessity, which are rare, leave your friend to learn unpleasant things from his enemies; they are ready enough to tell them.

—Holmes.

EVERYTHING that is mine, even to my life, I may give to one I love; but the secret of my friend is not mine to give.

—Sidney.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

EVERY ONE that flatters thee
Is no friend in misery.
Words are easy, like the wind;
Faithful friends are hard to find.
Every man will be thy friend
Whilst thou hast wherewith to spend.
—Shakespeare.

FRIENDSHIP, peculiar boon of heaven,
The noble mind's delight and pride,
To men and angels only given,
To all the lower world denied.
Thy gentle flows of guiltless joys
On fools and villains ne'er descend;
In vain for thee the tyrant sighs,
And hugs a flatterer for a friend.
Nor shall thine ardours cease to glow
When souls to peaceful climes remove;
What rais'd our virtue here below
Shall aid our happiness above.
—Jonson.

FRIENDSHIP often ends in love; but love in friendship never.

FRIENDSHIP is love without its flowers or veil.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

FRIENDSHIP maketh indeed a fair day in the affections from storm and tempests, but it maketh daylight in the understanding out of darkness and confusion of thoughts.
—Bacon.

FRIENDSHIP is to be valued for what there is in it, not what can be gotten out of it. When two people appreciate each other because each has found the other convenient to have around, they are not friends, they are simply acquaintances with a business understanding. To seek friendship for its utility is as futile as to seek the end of a rainbow for its bag of gold. A true friend is always useful in the highest sense; but we should beware of thinking of our friends as brother members of a mutual benefit association, with its periodical demands and threats of suspension for non-payment of dues.

FLOWERS are lovely; love is flower-like;
Friendship is a sheltering tree;
O! the joys, that came down shower-like,
Of Friendship, Love and Liberty.
—Coleridge.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

FRIENDSHIP, like love, is destroyed by long absence, though it may be increased by short intermissions. What we have missed long enough to want it we value more when it is regained; but that which has been lost until it is forgotten will be found at last with little gladness, and with still less if a substitute has supplied the place.
—Jonson.

FAR from the eyes, far from the heart, say the vulgar. Believe nothing of it; if it was so, the farther you were distant from me the cooler my love for you would be; whilst on the contrary the less I can enjoy your presence, the more the desire of that pleasure burns in the soul of your friend.
—St. Anselm.

FEMALE friendship, indeed, is to a man the bulwark, sweetener, ornament, of his existence. To his mental culture it is invaluable; without it all his knowledge of books will never give him knowledge of the world.
—Montaigne.

FRIENDSHIP is rarer than love and more enduring.
—Taylor.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

FRIENDS require to be advised and re-proved, and such treatment, when it is kindly, should be taken in a friendly spirit.

—Cicero.

FRIENDSHIP is a strong and habitual inclination in two persons to promote the good and happiness of each other.

—Addison.

FELLOWSHIP is heaven, and lack of fellowship is hell; fellowship is life, and lack of fellowship is death; and the deeds that ye do upon earth, it is for fellowship's sake that ye do them.

—Morris.

IF you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow;
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend till he is dead?

—Unknown.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

HAS fortune frowned? Her frowns were vain;

For hearts like ours she could not chill!

Have friends proved false? Their love might wane,

But ours grew fonder, firmer still.

—Watts.

HE who serves and seeks for gain,

And follows but for form,

Will pack when it begins to rain,

And leave thee in the storm.

—Shakespeare.

HE that hath no friend and no enemy is one of the vulgar, and without talents, power, or energy.

—Lavater.

HAPPY the man whose life is spent in friendship's calm security.

—Aeschylus.

FRIEND is a word of royal tone;

Friend is a poem all alone.

—From the Persian.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

HOW sweet, how passing sweet is solitude,
But grant me still a friend in my retreat,
Whom I may whisper—solitude is sweet.
—Cowper.

HAND grasps hand, eye lights eye, in good Friendship. And great hearts expand and grow one in the sense of this world's life.
—Browning.

HOW few are there born with souls capable of friendship. Then how much fewer must there be capable of love, for love includes friendship and much more besides!

HE who has a thousand friends has not a friend to spare,
And he who has an enemy will meet him everywhere.

I COULD not live without the love of my friends.
—Keats.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

I AWAKE this morning with devout thanksgiving for my friends, the old and the new.
—Emerson.

I FIND no place that does not breathe
Some gracious memory of my friend.
—Tennyson.

I HAVE always laid it down as a maxim, and found it justified by experience, that a man and woman make far better friendships than can exist between two of the same sex; but with this condition, that they never have made, or are to make, love with each other.
—Byron.

IF a man does not make new acquaintances as he passes through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man should keep his friendships in constant repair.
—Jonson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

I LOVED my friend for his gentleness, his candor, his good repute, his freedom even from my own livelier manner, his calm and reasonable kindness. It was not particular talent that attracted me to him, or anything striking whatsoever. I should say in one word, it was his goodness.

I NEVER yet cast a true affection on a woman; but I have loved my friend as I do virtue, my soul, my God. I love my friend before myself, and yet methinks I do not love him enough; some few months hence my multiplied affection will make me believe I have not loved him at all. When I am from him I am dead till I be with him; when I am with him I am not satisfied, but would be still nearer him.

—Browne.

IN all holiest and most unselfish love, friendship is the purest element of the affection. No love in any relation of life can be at its best if the element of friendship is lacking. And no love can transcend, in its possibilities of noble and ennobling exaltation, a love that is pure friendship.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

A TRUE friendship is as wise as it is tender.
—Thoreau.

I THINK when people have forgotten that each other exists it is as though they had never met. They are perhaps something more distant still than strangers, for to strangers friendship in the future is possible; but those who have been separated by oblivion on the one hand and by contempt on the other are parted as surely and eternally as though death had divided them.
—Ouida.

IF words came as ready as ideas, and ideas as feelings, I could say ten hundred kind things. You know not my supreme happiness at having one on earth whom I can call friend.
—Lamb.

IF it were expediency that cemented friendships, expediency when changed would dissolve them, but because one's nature can never change, therefore true friendships are eternal.
—Cicero.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

IF I could choose a young man's companions, some should be weaker than himself, that he might learn patience and charity; many should be as nearly as possible his equals, that he might have the full freedom of his friendship; but most should be stronger than he was, that he might forever be thinking humbly of himself and tempted to higher things. —Brooks.

IN friendship there is nothing pretended, nothing feigned; whatever there is in it is both genuine and spontaneous. —Cicero.

IS it so small a thing
To have enjoyed the sun,
To have lived light in the spring,
To have loved, to have thought, to have done;
To have advanced true friends, and beat down baffling foes?
—Arnold.

IT is only the great-hearted who can be true friends; the mean and cowardly can never know what true friendship is.
—Kingsley.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

IF any little love of mine
    May make a life the sweeter,
If any little care of mine
    May make a friend's the fleeter,
If any lift of mine may ease
    The burden of another,
God give me love and care and strength
    To help my toiling brother.

IT is the secret sympathy,
The silver link, the silver tie,
Which heart to heart, and mind to mind
In body and in soul can bind.

—Scott.

IT is easy to say how we love new friends and what we think of them, but words can never trace out all the fibres that knit us to the old.

—Eliot.

MY treasures are my friends.
If thought unlock her mysteries,
    If friendship on me smile,
I walk in marble galleries,
    I talk with kings the while.

—Emerson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

JUST as in Love's records there are many cases of one-sided passion, so in friendship you frequently see one person who makes all the professions or demonstrations, while the other person is either passive or actually bored.

—Unknown.

LET us approach our friend with an audacious trust in the truth of his heart, in the breadth, impossible to be overturned, of his foundations.

—Emerson.

LET us learn to be content with what we have. Let us get rid of our false estimates, set up all the higher ideals—a quiet home; vines of our own planting; a few books full of the inspiration of genius; a few friends worthy of being loved and able to love us in turn; a hundred innocent pleasures that bring no pain or sorrow; a devotion to the right that will never swerve; a simple religion empty of all bigotry; full of trust and hope and love; and to such a philosophy this world will give up all the empty joy it has.

—Swing.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

ONLY a smile from a kindly face,
On the busy street that day,
Forgotten as soon as given, perhaps,
As the donor went her way.
But straight to my heart it went speeding,
To gild the clouds that were there,
And I found that of sunshine and life's blue skies,
I also might take my share.

—MacDonald.

LOVE and keep him for thy friend, who,
when all go away, will not forsake thee,
nor suffer thee to perish at the last.

—Kempis.

MANY there be who call themselves our friends;
Yet, ah, if heaven sends
One, only one, so mated to our soul,
To make our half a whole,
Rich beyond price we are.

MEN only become friends by a community of pleasures. He who cannot be softened into gaiety, cannot be easily melted into kindness.

—Johnson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

MY careful breast was free again,
O friend, my bosom said;
Through thee alone the sky is arched,
Through thee the rose is red.
Me, too, thy nobleness has taught
To master my despair;
The fountains of my hidden life
Are through thy friendship fair.
—Emerson.

NEW friends can never take the same place in our lives as the old. The former may be better liked for the time, their society may even have more attractions, but in a way they are strangers. If through change of circumstances they go out of our lives, they go out of it altogether. These latter-day friendships have no root, as it were. Their growth is as Jonah's gourd—overshadowing, perhaps, and expansive, but all on the surface; whereas an old friend remains an old friend forever. Although separated for an indefinite period and not seen for years, if a chance happening brings old comrades together they resume the old relations in the most natural manner, and take up the former lines as easily as if there had been no break or interruption of the intermediate intercourse of auld lang syne.
—Unknown.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

NO distance of place or lapse of time can lessen the friendship of those who are thoroughly persuaded of each other's worth.

—Southey.

AFTER a certain age a new friend is a wonder. There is the age of blossoms and sweet budding green, the age of generous summer, the autumn when the leaves drop, and then winter shivering and bare.

—Thackeray.

NOTHING is more common than the name of friend, nothing more rare than true friendship.

TRUTHFULNESS, frankness, disinterestedness, and faithfulness are the qualities absolutely essential to friendship, and these must be crowned by a sympathy that enters into all the joys, the sorrows and the interests of the friend; that delights in all his upward progress, and when he stumbles or falls, stretches out the helping hand, and is tender and patient even when it condemns.

—Ware.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

OF all felicities, the most charming is that of a firm and gentle friendship. It sweetens all our cares, dispels our sorrows, and counsels us in all extremities. Nay, if there were no other comfort in it than the bare exercise of so generous a virtue, even for that single reason a man would not be without it; it is a sovereign antidote against all calamities—even against the fear of death itself.
—Seneca.

OF what shall a man be proud if he is not proud of his friends?
—Stevenson.

Old books, old wine, old nankin blue—
All things, in short, to which belong
The charm, the grace that Time makes strong,
All these I prize but (entre nous)
Old friends are best. —Dobson.

THE only reward of virtue is virtue. The only way to have a friend is to be one.
—Emerson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THE most powerful and the most lasting friendships are usually those of the early season of our lives, when we are most susceptible of warm and affectionate impressions. The connections into which we enter in any after-period decrease in strength as our passions abate in heat; and there is not, I believe, a single instance of vigorous friendship that ever struck root in a bosom chilled by years.

THE tide of friendship does not rise high on the banks of perfection. Amiable weaknesses and shortcomings are the food of love. It is from the roughness and imperfect breaks in a man that you are able to lay hold of him. My friend is not perfect—no more am I—and so we suit each other admirably.

—Smith.

OLD friends burn dim, like lamps in noisome air;
Love them for what they are; nor love them less,
Because to thee they are not what they were.

—Coleridge.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

OUR intellectual and active powers increase with our affection. The scholar sits down to write, and all his years of meditation do not furnish him with one good thought or happy expression; but it is not necessary to write a letter to a friend, and, forthwith, troops of gentle thoughts invest themselves, on every hand, with chosen words.
—Emerson.

ONLY he who is unwilling to love without being loved is likely to feel that there is no such thing as friendship in the world.

PERHAPS the most delightful friendships are those in which there is much agreement, much disputation, and yet more personal liking.
—Eliot.

SILENCE is the ambrosial night in the intercourse of friends, in which their sincerity is recruited and takes deeper root. The language of friends is not words, but meanings. It is an intelligence above language.
—Thoreau.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

FRIENDSHIP hath the skill and observation of the best physician; the diligence and vigilance of the best nurse; and the tenderness and patience of the best mother.

—Lord Clarendon.

SO, if I live or die to serve my friend,
'Tis for my love—'tis for my friend alone,
And not for any rate that friendship bears
In heaven or on earth.

—Eliot.

SO long as we love, we serve. So long as we are loved by others I would almost say we are indispensable; and no man is useless while he has a friend.

—Stevenson.

TWO people who are friends make themselves responsible for each other. If I had a friend, and he went to the bad, and I met him in rags and poverty and disgrace, and if it ruined me to own him and help him, I should have to do it. If two men are really friends, nothing can come between them.

—Murray.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

SOME people keep a friend as children have a toy bank, into which they drop little coins now and again; and some day they draw out the whole of their savings at once.
—Unknown.

SOME seem to make a man a friend, or try to do so, because he lives near, because he is in the same business, travels on the same line of railway, or for some other trivial reason. There cannot be a greater mistake.
—Avebury.

TAKE heed of thy friends. A faithful friend is a strong defence; and he that hath found such a one hath found a treasure. Nothing doth countervail a faithful friend, and his excellency is invaluable.
—Proverbs.

THERE is no surer bond of friendship than an identity and community of ideas and tastes. What sweetness is left in life if you take away friendship? Robbing life of friendship is like robbing the world of the sun.
—Cicero.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THE only true and firm friendship is that between man and woman, because it is the only one free from all possible competition.
—Comte.

THE place where two friends met is sacred to them all through their friendship, all the more sacred as their friendship deepens and grows old.
—Brooks.

THE friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hooks of steel.
—Shakespeare.

THE making of friends who are real friends is the best token we have of a man's success in life.
—Hale.

THE years have taught some sweet, some bitter lessons—none wiser than this: to spend in all things else, but of old friends to be most miserly.
—Lowell.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

OF all the heavenly gifts that mortal men commend,
What trusty treasure in the world can countervail a friend?
Our health is soon decayed; goods, casual,
light and vain;
Broke have we seen the force of power, and honor suffer stain.
In body's lust man doth resemble but base brute;
True virtue gets and keeps a friend, good guide of our pursuit.
Whose hearty zeal with ours accords in every case;
No term of mine, no space of place, no storm can it deface.

—Nicholas Grimoald.

THE most I can do for my friend is simply to be his friend. I have no wealth to bestow upon him. If he knows I am happy in loving him, he will want no other reward. Is not friendship divine in this?

—Lavater.

TAKE envy out of a character and it leaves great possibilities for friendship.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THERE is no friend like the old friend who has shared our morning days,
No greeting like his welcome, no homage like his praise.

Fame is the scentless sunflower with gaudy
crown of gold;

But friendship is the breathing rose, with sweets in every fold. —Holmes.

THERE is no man so friendless but what he can find a friend sincere enough to tell him disagreeable truths.

—Lytton.

THERE is, after all, something in those trifles that friends bestow upon each other which is an unfailing indication of the place the giver holds in the affections. I would believe that one who preserved a lock of hair, a simple flower or any trifle of my bestowing, loved me, though no show was made of it; while all the protestations in the world would not win my confidence in one who set no value on such little things.

Trifles they may be; but it is by such that character and disposition are oftenest revealed.

—Irving.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THE feeling of friendship is like that of being comfortably filled with roast beef; love, like being enlivened with champagne.
—Jonson.

THERE are two elements that go to the composition of friendship, each so sovereign that I can detect no superiority in either, no reason why either should be first named. One is Truth. A friend is a person with whom I may be sincere. Before him I may think aloud. I am arrived at last in the presence of a man so real and equal that I may drop even those undermost garments of dissimulation, courtesy, and second thought, which men never put off, and may deal with him with the simplicity and wholeness with which one chemical atom meets another. Sincerity is the luxury allowed, like diadems and authority, only to the highest rank, that being permitted to speak truth as having none above it to court or conform unto.

Every man alone is sincere. The other element of friendship is tenderness.

—Emerson.

FOOLISH he who for the world would change a faithful friend.

—Euripides.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

HE who wrongs his friend
Wrongs himself more and ever bears about
A silent court of justice in his breast.

—Tennyson.

THINK of the importance of friendship in the education of men. It will make a man honest; it will make him a hero; it will make him a saint. It is the state of the just dealing with the just, the magnanimous with the magnanimous, the sincere with the sincere, man with man.

—Thoreau.

THOU mayest be sure that he that will in private tell thee of thy faults is thy friend, for he adventures thy dislike, and doth hazard thy hatred; there are few men that can endure it, every man for the most part delighting in self-praise, which is one of the most universal follies that bewitcheth mankind.

—Raleigh.

TWO friends, two bodies with one soul inspired.

—Pope.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THY lips are bland,
And bright the friendship of thine eye;
And in my thoughts with scarce a sigh,
I take the pressure of thine hand.
—Tennyson.

THY friend will come to thee unsought,
With nothing can his love be bought,
His soul thine own will know at sight,
With him thy heart can speak outright.
Greet him nobly, love him well,
Show him where your best thoughts dwell,
Trust him greatly and for aye;
A true friend comes but once your way.
—Unknown.

TREAT your friends for what you know them to be. Regard no surfaces. Consider not what they did, but what they intended.
—Thoreau.

TO contract ties of friendship with any one, is to contract friendship with his virtue; there ought not to be any other motive in friendship.
—Confucius.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THY voice is near me in my dreams;
In accents sweet and low,
Telling of happiness and love
In days long, long ago.

Word after word I think I hear,
Yet strange it seems to me
That, though I listen to thy voice,
Thy face I never see.

From night to night my weary heart
Lives on the treasured past,
And ev'ry day I fondly say,
He'll come to me at last.

Yet still I weep, and watch and pray
As time rolls slowly on;
And yet I have no hope but thee,
Thou first, thou dearest one.

—Lindsay.

WE ought to acquaint ourselves with the beautiful; we ought to contemplate it with rapture, and attempt to raise ourselves to its height. And in order to gain strength for that, we must keep ourselves thoroughly unselfish—we must not make it our own, but rather seek to communicate it; indeed, to make a sacrifice of it to those who are dear and precious to us.

—Goethe.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

TELL me, gentle traveler, who hast wandered through the world, and seen the sweetest roses blow, and brightest gliding rivers, of all thine eyes have seen, which is the fairest land? "Child, shall I tell thee where nature is more blest and fair? It is where those we love abide. Though that space be small, ample is it above kingdoms; though it be a desert, through it runs the river of Paradise, and there are the enchanted bowers." —Unknown.

TO friends and e'en to foes true kindness show;
No kindly heart unkindly deeds will do;
Harshness will alienate a bosom friend,
And kindness reconcile a deadly foe.
—Unknown.

WE let our friends pass idly, like our time,
Till they are lost, and then we see our crime!
We think what worth in them might have been known,
What duties done, what kind affections shown.
Untimely knowledge! bought at heavy cost,
When what we might have better used, is lost.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

WANTING to have a friend is altogether different from wanting to be a friend. The former is a mere natural human craving, the other is the life of Christ in the soul.

MY friend peers in on me with merry
Wise face, and though the sky stay dim,
The very light of day, the very Sun's self comes in with him.

—A. C. Swinburne.

WALKING here, in twilight, O my friends,
I hear your voices, softened by the distance,
And pause, and turn to listen, as each sends His words of friendship, comfort, and assistance.

—Longfellow.

WE can never replace a friend. When a man is fortunate enough to have several, he finds they are all different. No one has a double in friendship.

—Schiller.

"WHAT is the secret of your life?" asked Mrs. Browning of Charles Kingsley; "tell me, that I may make mine beautiful too." He replied, "I had a friend."

WHAT we usually call friends are only acquaintances and familiarities brought together through some particular occasion or use, by which some little intercourse exists between our souls; but in the friendship of which I speak they are so tightly joined together one to the other, in so universal a mixture, that it effaces all signs of the seam by which they were first joined.

—Montaigne.

WE just shake hands at meeting
With many that come nigh;
We nod the head in greeting
To many that go by.
But welcome through the gateway
Our few old friends and true;
The hearts leap up and straightway
There's open house for you,
Old friends,
There's open house for you.

—Massey.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

WHATEVER the number of a man's friends, there will be times in his life when he has one too few; but if he has only one enemy, he is lucky indeed if he has not one too many.

—Lytton.

HE who forsakes a friend is himself forsaken of the Gods.

—Klopstock.

THERE are many moments in friendship, as in love, when silence is beyond words. The faults of our friend may be clear to us, but it is well to seem to shut our eyes to them. Friendship is usually treated by the majority of mankind as a tough and everlasting thing which will survive all manner of bad treatment. But this is an exceedingly great and foolish error; it may die in an hour of a single unwise word; its condition of existence is that it should be dealt with delicately and tenderly, being as it is a sensitive plant and not a roadside thistle. We must not expect our friend to be above humanity.

—Ouida.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

COME friend, my fire is burning bright,
A fire's no longer out of place,
How clear it glows (there's frost to-night)
It looks white winter in the face.

Be mine the tree that feeds the fire!
Be mine, the sun knows when to set!
Be mine, the months when friends desire
To turn in here from cold and wet!
—Constable.

'TIS as hard to be a good fellow, a good friend, and a lover of women, as 'tis to be a good fellow, and a good friend, and a lover of money.

—Wycherley.

TWO people cannot strike hands together, unless with a feeling of disagreeable resolve, and not gain something; perhaps the most treasured influence of their lives.
—Unknown.

ONE friend of tried value is better than many of no account.

—Anacharsis.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

AND friendship's rainbow-promise fair,
Of hope and faith-crowned ties,
Doth find too soon that everywhere
A touch of discord lies.

—Freiberger.

HOW often, when life's summer day
Is waning, and its sun descends;
Wisdom drives laughing wit away,
And lovers shrivel into friends.

—Landor.

THE comfort of having a friend may be taken away, but not that of having had one.

—Seneca.

I HAVE heard you say,
That we shall see and know our friends in heaven.

—Shakespeare.

THE youth of friendship is better than its old age.

—Hazlitt.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

IF the friendships of the good be interrupted, their minds admit of no long change; as when the stalks of a lotus are broken the filaments within them are more visibly cemented.

—Hitopadesa.

I wonder.
(IN life it is difficult to say who do you the most mischief—enemies with the worst intentions or friends with the best.)

—Lytton.

HE who would enjoy many friends, and live happy in this world, should be deaf, dumb, and blind to the follies and vices of it.

—Edward Moore.

SOME of the firmest friendships have been contracted between persons of different dispositions, the mind being often pleased with those perfections which are new to it, and which it does not find among its own accomplishments.

—Budgell.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

OLD friends are the great blessing of one's later years. Half a word conveys one's meaning. They have a memory of the same events, and have the same mode of thinking. I have young relations that may grow upon me, for my nature is affectionate, but can they grow old friends?

—Walpole.

TRUE, it is most painful not to meet the kindness and affection you feel you have deserved, and have a right to expect from others; but it is a mistake to complain of it; for it is of no use; you cannot extort friendship with a cocked pistol.

—Smith.

THE ruins of old friendships are a more melancholy spectacle to me than those of desolated palaces. They exhibit the heart that was once lighted up with joy all damp and deserted, and haunted by those birds of ill-omen that only nestle in ruins.

—Campbell.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

STILL, Love a summer sunrise shines,
So rich its clouds are hung,
So sweet its songs are sung.
And Friendship's but broad, common day,
With light enough to show
Where fruit with brambles grow;
With warmth enough to feed
The grain of daily need.

—Unknown.

NEVER yet
Was noble man but made ignoble talk.
He makes no friend who never made a foe,
—Tennyson.

HE that hath gained a friend hath given

—Shakespeare.

IF your friend has got a heart,
There is something fine in him;
Cast away his darker part,— Cling to what's divine in him.

—Dach.

THE parting of friends united by sympathetic tastes, is always painful; and friends, unless their sympathy subsist, had much better never meet.

—Disraeli.

WE were friends from the first moment. Sincere attachments usually begin at the beginning.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

FREEZE, freeze, thou bitter sky,
Thou dost not bite so nigh
As benefits forgot:
Though thou the waters warp,
Thy sting is not so sharp,
As friend remember'd not.
—Shakespeare.

A POET might sing you his sweetest of songs,
But this must the poet have known:
Of the heart whose love to you only belongs,
Whose strength would be spent to save you
from wrongs,
Of a soul knit to yours with the mightiest
thongs,
And sing them for you alone!

An artist might paint you a picture fair
That would equal the greatest known;
But the heart of a friend, to do and to dare,
To save you from sorrow, and trial, and care,
Is something an artist, paint he ever so rare,
Has never on canvas shown!

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

YE who have scorned each other
Or injured friend or brother,
In this fast fading year;
Ye who, by word or deed,
Have made a kind heart bleed,
Come gather here.

Let sinned against, and sinning
Forget their strife's beginning,
And join in friendship now;
Be links no longer broken,
Be sweet forgiveness spoken,
Under the Holly Bough.

Ye who have nourished sadness
Estranged from hope and gladness,
In this fast fading year;
Ye, with o'erburdened mind,
Made aliens from your kind,
Come gather here.

—Mackay.

A MORE glorious victory cannot be gained over another than this, that when the injury began on his part, the kindness should begin on ours.

—Tillotson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

LIKE alone acts upon him. Therefore, do not amend by reasoning, but by example; approach feeling by feeling; do not hope to excite love except by love. Be what you wish others to become. Let yourself and not your words preach.

—Amiel.

WHY is my verse so barren of new pride?
So far from variation or quick change?
Why, with the time do I not glance aside
To new-found methods and to compounds strange?

Why write I still all one, ever the same,
And keep invention in a notèd weed,
That every word doth almost tell my name,
Showing their birth and where they did proceed?

O, know, sweet love, I always write of you,
And you and love are still my argument:
So all my best is dressing old words new,
Spending again what is already spent;
For as the sun is daily new and old,
So is my love still telling what is told.

—Shakespeare.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

HOW oft as we sat 'round the board,
My dear old friends and I,
We drew from Memory's sweet, sad hoard,
Enough to make us sigh.
And merry wit was silenced there,
By some vague haunting thought,
Which seemed to fill the very air,
Around, unbid, unsought.

And so may this sweet, happy hour,
My dear new friends, I pray,
Be like some book-pressed fragile flower,
That Youth has lain away;
But when life's book is widely spread,
This sweet but faded hour,
Will bring sad thoughts of moments fled,
As does the wilted flower.

I NEVER did repent for doing good,
Nor shall not now; for in companions
That do converse and waste the time together,
Whose souls to bear an equal yoke of love,
There must be needs a like proportion
Of lineaments, of manners, and of spirit.
—Shakespeare.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

HOW say ye "We loved once,"
Blasphemers—Is your earth not cold enow,
Mourners, without that snow?
Ah, friends, and would ye wrong each other so?
And could ye say of some whose love is known,
Whose prayers have met your own, Whose tears have fallen for you, whose smiles have shone
So long,—“We loved them ONCE”?

—E. B. Browning.

THE strong necessity of time commands
Our services awhile; but my full heart
Remains in use with you.

—Shakespeare.

SELF-DENIAL, for the sake of self-denial, does no good; self-sacrifice for its own sake is no religious act at all. . . . Self-sacrifice, illuminated by love, is warmth and life, the blessedness and the only proper life of man.

—Robertson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

I THINK that good must come of good,
And ill of evil—surely unto all
In every place or time, seeing sweet fruit
Groweth from wholesome roots, or bitter
things
From poison stocks: yea, seeing, too, how spite Breeds hate—and kindness friends—or patience peace.

—Arnold.

UNFADING joys thy lot should crown,
If lips like mine could call them down.
—Wilson.

INTREAT me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God. Where thou diest, I will die, and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me, and more also, if aught but death part thee and me.
—Ruth to Naomi.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

BUT of your goodness pray to this give heed,
That friendship doth in friendship find its meed.

LET thy name
    Dwell ever in my heart and on my lips,
Theme of my lyre and burden of my song.
                                    —Ovid.

SOME love the glow of outward show,
    Some love mere wealth, and try to win it;
The house to me may lowly be,
    If I but like the people in it.

What's all the gold that glitters sold,
    When linked to hard or haughty feeling?
Whate'er we're told, the nobler gold
    Is truth of heart and manly dealing.

Then let them seek, whose minds are weak,
    Mere fashion's smile, and try to win it;
The house to me may lowly be,
    If I but like the people in it.

—Swain.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THERE is no such certain evidence of friendship as never to overlook the sins and failings of our brethren. Hast thou seen them at enmity? Reconcile them. Hast thou seen them set on unlawful gain? Check them. Hast thou seen them wronged? Stand up in their defense. It is not on them but on thyself thou art conferring the chief benefit. It is for this purpose that we are friends—that we may be of good service to one another. A man will listen in a different spirit to a friend. An indifferent person he will regard perhaps with suspicion, and so in like manner an instructor, but not so a true friend.

—St. Chrysostom.

FRIENDSHIP, love and piety, ought to be handled with a sort of mysterious secrecy; they ought to be spoken of only in the rare moments of perfect confidence.

—Novalis.

I WEIGH my friend's affection with mine own.

—Shakespeare.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

AS ships meet at sea,—a moment together, when words of greeting must be spoken, and then away upon the deep,—so men meet in this world; and I think we should cross no man's path without hailing him, and if he needs, give him supplies.

—Henry Ward Beecher.

ARE we ever truly read, save by the one that loves us best? Love is blind, the phrase runs. Nay, I would rather say, love sees as God sees, and with infinite wisdom has infinite pardon.

—Ouida.

AS earth pours freely to the sea
Her thousand streams of wealth untold
Glad that its very sands are gold.
So flows my silent life to thee.

( THE best conduct a man can adopt is that which gains him the esteem of others without depriving him of his own. ) —Talmud.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

AND the finest fellow of all would be the one who could be glad to have lived because the world was chiefly miserable, and his life had come to help some one who needed it.

—Eliot.

TALK not of wasted affection,
Affection never was wasted;
If it enrich not the heart of another,
Its water returning
Back to their springs, like the rain,
Shall fill them full of refreshment;
That which the fountain sends forth
Returns again to the fountain.

—Longfellow.

BEYOND all wealth, honour, or even health, is the attachment we form to noble souls; because to become one with the good, generous, and true, is to become in a measure good, generous, and true, ourselves.

—Arnold.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THEY who love best need friendship most,
Hearts only thrive on varied good;
And he who gathers from a host
Of friendly hearts his daily food,
Is the best friend that we can boast.
—Holland.

AND so farewell! perchance on Earth
God's finger—as 'twixt thee and me—
Will never make that wonder clear
Why thus it drew me unto thee.
—Memnon.

YES, we must ever be friends; and of all who offer you friendship
Let me be ever the first, the truest, the nearest and dearest.
—Longfellow.

WE become like those whom we habitually admire.
—Drummond.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

HAVE love; not love alone for one,
But man as man thy brother call,
And scatter like the circling sun
Thy charities on all.

—Schiller.

I COME here as your friend,—I am your friend.

—Longfellow.

DO not form friendships hastily, but once formed hold fast to them. It is equally discreditable to have no friends, and to be always changing one's acquaintances.

IT takes a lifetime of close intimacies to convince each of us, of our absolute, essential loneliness; to make us feel that speech is only clamour, that intercourse only means points of contact, that solitude is often our only substitute for peace.

—Esler.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

ONLY a shelter for my head I sought,
One stormy winter night;
To me the blessing of my life was brought,
Making the whole world bright.
How shall I thank thee for a gift so sweet,
O dearest Heavenly Friend?
I sought a resting-place for weary feet,
And found my journey's end.

Only the latchet of a friendly door
My timid fingers tried;
A loving heart, with all its precious store,
To me was opened wide.
I asked for shelter from the passing shower,—
My sun shall always shine!
I would have sat beside the hearth one hour,—
And the whole heart was mine!
—Ruckert.

FRIENDS! I have but one, and he, I hear, is not in town; nay, can have but one friend, for a true heart admits of but one friendship as of one love. But in having that friend I have a thousand.
—Wycherley.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

WE have been friends together,
In sunshine and in shade;
Since first beneath the chestnut trees
In infancy we play'd.
But coldness dwells within my heart—
A cloud is on thy brow;
We have been friends together—
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been gay together;
We have laugh'd at little jests;
For the fount of hope was gushing,
Warm and joyous in our breasts.
But laughter now hath fled thy lip,
And sullen glooms thy brow;
We have been gay together—
Shall a light word part us now?

We have been sad together—
We have wept with bitter tears,
O'er the grass grown graves, where slum-ber'd
The hopes of early years.
The voices which are silent there
Would bid thee clear thy brow;
We have been sad together—
O what shall part us now?

—Norton.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

FOR every leaf the loveliest flower,
Which beauty sighs for from her bower—
For every star a drop of dew—
For every sun a sky of blue—
For every heart, a heart as true.

—Bailey.

ALAS! they had been friends in youth;
But whispering tongues can poison truth:
And constancy lives in realms above;
And life is thorny, and youth is vain;
And to be wroth with one we love,
Doth work like madness in the brain.
And thus it chanced, as I divine,
With Roland and Sir Leoline.
Each spake words of high disdain
And insult to his heart's best brother:
They parted—ne'er to meet again!
But never either found another;
To free the hollow heart from paining—
They stood aloof, the scars remaining,
Like cliffs which had been rent asunder;
A dreary sea now flows between,
But neither heat, nor frost, nor thunder,
Shall wholly do away, I ween,
The marks of that which once hath been.
—Coleridge.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

WHEN to the sessions of sweet silent thought

I summon up remembrance of things past,

I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
And with old woes new wail my dear
time's waste;

Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
For precious friends hid in death's date-less night,

And weep afresh love's long since cancell'd
woe,

And moan the expense of many a vanish'd sight;

Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,
And heavily from woe to woe tell o'er

The sad account of fore-bemoan'd moan,
Which I new pay as if not paid before.

But if the while I think on thee, dear
Friend,

All losses are restored, and sorrows end.

—Shakespeare.

SINCE we deserved the name of friends,

And thine effect so lives in me,

A part of mine may live in thee

And move thee on to noble ends.

—Tennyson.

LOVE is the greatest of human affections, and friendship the noblest and most refined improvement of love.

SHEIK SCHUBLI, taken sick, was borne one day
Unto the hospital. A host the way Behind him thronged. "Who are you?"
Schubli cried.
"We are your friends," the multitude replied.
Sheik Schubli threw a stone at them; they fled.
"Come back, ye false pretenders!" then he said;
"A friend is one who, ranked among his foes,
By him he loves, and stoned, and beat with blows,
Will still remain as friendly as before,
And to his friendship only add the more."

—Shakespeare.

THE books for young people say a great deal about the selection of friends; it is because they really have nothing to say about friends. They mean associates and confidants merely. Friendship takes place between those who have an affinity for one another, and is a perfectly natural and inevitable result. No professions or advances will avail.

—Thoreau.

AH, friend, let us be true
To one another! For the world, which seems
To lie before us like a land of dreams,
So various, so beautiful, so new,
Hath really neither joy, nor love, nor light, Nor certitude, nor peace, nor help for pain;
And we are here as on a darkling plain Swept with confused alarms of struggle and flight,
Where ignorant armies clash by night.
—Arnold.

WHO in want a hollow friend doth try,
Directly seasons him his enemy.
—Shakespeare.

FIRST of all things for friendship there

A MAN'S love is the measure of his fitness for good or bad company here or elsewhere. Men are tattooed with their special beliefs, like so many South Sea Islanders; but a real human heart with divine love in it, beats with the same glow under all patterns of all earth's thousand tribes.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

A COMMON friendship—Who talks of a common friendship? There is no such thing in the world. On earth no word is more sublime.

—Drummond.

FRIENDSHIP survives death better than absence.

—Senn.

WHEN friendship goes with love it must play second fiddle.

THE earth to the songs of the poet
Resounds in a deathless tune,
Though hearts be upon or below it—
Though the Winter be here or the June.
Of the numberless songs that are ringing,
Let the cadence of one song flow
For the Aprils fled and the living and dead—
The friends of the Long Ago.

—Hale.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

DEVOTION to a friend does not consist in doing everything for him, but simply that which is agreeable, and of service to him, and let it only be revealed by accident.

—Unknown.

NEVER to have encountered a constancy equal to one's own is tragic.

THE ring of coin is often the knell of friendship.

—Unknown.

THE sweet sincerity of joy and peace which I draw from this alliance with my brother's soul, is the nut itself, whereof all nature and all thought is but the husk and shell. Happy is the house that shelters a friend! It might well be built, like a festal bower or arch, to entertain him a single day. Happier, if he know the solemnity of that relation, and honor its law.

—Emerson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

ETERNAL blessings crown my earliest
friend,
And round his dwelling guardian saints attend;
Blest be that spot where cheerful guests retire
To pause from toil, and trim their evening fire;
Blest that abode where want and pain repair,
And every stranger finds a ready chair;
Blest be those feasts with simple plenty crowned,
With all the ruddy family around.
—Goldsmith.

WHAT matters if the years depart if Friendship stays unchanged.
—Bingham.

AND when two souls are changed and mixed so,
It is what they and none but they can do.
This, this is friendship, that abstracted flame
Which grovelling mortals know not how to name.
—Philips.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

BY friendship I mean the greatest love and the greatest usefulness, and the most open communication, and the most noble sufferings, and the most exemplary faithfulness, and the severest truth, and the heartiest counsel, and the greatest union of mind, of which brave men and women are capable.

—Taylor.

LOVED wilt thou be? then love must first by thee be given;
No purchase money else avails beneath the heaven.

—Trench.

FRIENDSHIP is not like love; it cannot say,
“Now is fruition give me and now
The crown of me is set on mine own brow,
This is the minute, the hour, and the day.”
It cannot find a moment which it may Call that for which it lived; there is no vow,
Nor pledge thereof, nor first-fruits of its bough,
Nor harvest, and no myrtle crown nor bay.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

I WONDER if there is anything in this world as beautiful as good strong friendship between two men? They don't go round doing the molly coddle act; they don't kiss each other every time they meet; in fact, they never do kiss each other, unless one is lying cold in death; but they are sure one knows the other is always going to stand by him, and they feel that, no matter what happiness, each can rely on the other.

—Unknown.

OTHERS will kiss you while your mouth is red;
Beauty is brief. Of all the guests who come
When the lamps shine on flowers, and wine, and bread,
In time of famine who will spare a crumb?
Therefore, oh, next to God I pray you, keep Yourself as your own friend, the tried,
the true,
Sit your own watch—others will surely sleep,
Weep your own tears, ask none to die with you.

—Piatt.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

THE end of friendship is a commerce the most strict and homely that can be joined; more strict than any of which we have experience. It is for aid and comfort through all the relations and passages of life and death. It is fit for serene days, and graceful gifts, and country rambles, but also for rough roads and hard fare, ship-wreck, poverty, and persecution. It keeps company with the sallies of wit and the trances of religion. We are to dignify to each other the daily needs and offices of man's life, and embellish it by courage, wisdom and unity. It should never fall into something usual and settled, but should be alert and inventive and add rhyme and reason to what was drudgery.

—Emerson.

GIVE love, and love to your heart will flow,
A strength in your inmost need;
Have faith, and a score of hearts will show
Their faith in your word and deed.

IT is the men and women who believe most, and love best, that win most love.
—Kendall.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

IF you visit love, kindness, tenderness upon others, what ye mete is measured to you.

—Clarkson.

A FRIEND that you have to buy won't be worth what you pay for him, no matter what that may be.

—Prentice.

THE only true and firm friendship is that between man and woman, because it is the only affection exempt from actual or possible rivalry.

—A. Comte.

TO practice a deception is almost to commit a crime. The flow of kindness thus driven back is withdrawn from others whom it might have benefited.

—Carmen Sylva.

LOVE, and you shall be loved. All love is mathematically just, as much as the two sides of an algebraic equation.

—Emerson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

ABSENT or present, still to thee,
My friend, what magic spells belong!
As all can tell, who share like me,
In turn thy converse and thy song.
—Byron.

TRUE happiness
Consists not in the multitude of friends,
But in their worth and choice.
—Jonson.

OLD friends are best. King James used to call for his old shoes: they were easiest for his feet.
—Seldon.

FRIENDSHIP'S an abstract of Love's noble
flame,
'Tis love refined, and purged from all its dross,
'Tis next to angel's love, if not the same,
As strong as passion is, though not so gross.
It antedates a glad eternity
And is a heaven in epitome.
—Philips.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

DISTILL'D amidst the gloom of night,
Dark hangs the dew-drop on the thorn;
Till, notic'd by approaching light,
It glitters in the smile of morn.

Morn soon retires, her feeble pow'r
The sun out-beams with genial day,
And gently, in benignant hour,
Exhales the liquid pearl away.

Thus on affliction's sable bed
Deep sorrows rise of saddest hue;
Condensing round the mourner's head
They bathe the cheek with chilly dew.

Though pity shows her dawn from heaven,
When kind she points assistance near,
To friendship's sun alone 'tis given
To soothe and dry the mourner's tear.
—Penrose.

ASSOCIATION with others is useful also in strengthening the character, and in enabling us, while we never lose sight of our main object, to thread our way wisely and well.

—S. Smiles.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

WHAT is a friend? one who in Fortune's rays
Would bask with us as on a sun-kissed strand,
Beside a tranquil sea, whose restful sand
Glistens as gold to woo the passer's gaze,
But who, should Sorrow's clouds bedim our days
And angry winds, at adverse fate's command,
Drive our life's barque against a barren land,
A sudden zeal for other skies displays?
Or he who, like a valiant knight of yore,
    When Summer yields to Winter's icy breath
Or Mirth's gay laughter to the tears of Woe,
Champions our cause, ne'er fearful of the foe,
True to the legend which his pennon bore,
SEMPER FIDELIS till the call of Death?

—Norman.

THE essence of friendship is entireness,
a total magnanimity and trust.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

A LOOK—and lo our natures meet!
A word—our minds make one reply!
A touch—our hearts have but one beat!
And if we walk together—why
The same thought guides our feet.

Heed well our friends while yet we may!
There are so many winds about,
And any wind may blow away
Love's airy child. O! never doubt
He is the common prey.

O! every chance while love remains
And every chance while he survives,
Is something added to love's gains;
Comfort our friend while yet he lives!
Dead what shall pay our pains?
—Meredith.

OH say, and again repeat, fair, fair—and still I will say it—
How fair, my friend, and good to see thou art,
On pine or oak or wall thy name I do not blazon—
Love has too deeply graved it in my heart.

—Greek Epigram.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

I BREATHED a song into the air,
It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For who has sight so keen and strong,
That it can follow the flight of a song;

The song from beginning to end,
I found again in the heart of a friend.
—Longfellow.

OLD friends to talk:—
Ay, bring those chosen few,
The wise, the courtly, and the true
So rarely found.
—Messinger.

IT is by loving, and not by being loved, that one can come nearest to the soul of another. Where two love, it is the loving of each other, and not the being loved by each other, that originates, perfects, and assures their blessedness.

—MacDonald.

IT is useless to demand affection: the thing for us to do is to bestow affection, to serve, to be a friend to others, and, lo! by and by friends come to us.

—Merriam.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

O FRIENDSHIP, equal-poised control,
O heart, with kindest motion warm,
O sacred essence, other form,
O solemn ghost, O crowned soul.

—Tennyson.

HAPPY that man who has a friend to point out to him the perfection of duty, and yet to pardon him in the lapses of his infirmity.

—South.

THIS must my comfort be,
That sun that warms you here shall shine on me.

—Shakespeare.

GOD'S benison go with you; and with those
That would make good of bad, and friends of foes.

—Shakespeare.

A FAITHFUL friend is better than gold—a medicine for misery, an only possession.

—Burton.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

COME to me; what I seek in vain
Bring thou; into my spirit send Peace after care, balm after pain,
And be my friend.

—F. Tennyson

AS gold is tried by the furnace, and the baser metal shown, so the hollow-hearted friend is known by adversity.

—Metastasio.

A FRIENDSHIP as had mastered time:
Which masters time indeed, and is Eternal, separate from fears:
The all-assuming months and years,
Can take no part away from this.

—Tennyson.

BEAUTY, Good, and Knowledge are three sisters
That dote upon each other, friends to man,
Living together under the same roof,
And never can be sunder'd without tears.
And he that shuts Love out, in turn shall be Shut out from Love, and on her threshold lie
Howling in outer darkness.

—Tennyson.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

EACH year to ancient friendships adds a ring,
As to an oak, and precious more and more,
Without deservingness, or help of ours
They grow, and silent, wider spread each year
Their unbought ring of shelter or of shade.
—Lowell.

THE song-bird seeks its nest,
The sun sinks in the West—
And kindly thoughts are speeding out to you.
May joy with you abide,
May Hope be aye your guide,
And Love protect you, all life's journey through.
—Burnside.

FRIENDSHIP, a dear balm—
Whose coming is as light and music are Mid dissonance and gloom:—a star
Which moves not mid the moving heavens alone;
A smile among dark frowns; a beloved light;
A solitude, a refuge, a delight.
—Shelley.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

NOTHING delights the mind so much as true and sweet friendship. What a blessing it is when there are hearts prepared for you in which every secret rests securely, whose knowledge you fear less than your own, whose conversation calms your anxieties, whose opinion aids your plan, whose mirth dispels your sorrow, and whose very sight delights you.

—Seneca.

ALL faithful friends, and many friendships, in the days of time begun, are lasting here and growing still.

—Pollok.

THE man who prefers his dearest friend to the call of duty will soon show that he prefers himself to his dearest friend.

—Robertson.

FRIENDSHIP is the holiest of gifts;
God can bestow nothing more sacred upon us!

It enhances every joy, mitigates every pain.
Everyone can have a friend,
Who himself knows how to be a friend.

—Tiedge.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

MUCH beautiful and excellent and fair Was seen beneath the sun; but nought was seen
More beautiful or excellent or fair
Than face of faithful friend, fairest when seen
In darkest day. And many sounds were sweet,
Most ravishing and pleasant to the ear;
But sweeter none than voice of faithful
friend,
Sweet always, sweetest heard in loudest storm.

—Pollok.

RESPECT so far the holy laws of this fellowship as not to prejudice its perfect flower by your impatience for its opening. We must be our own before we can be another's.

—Emerson.

NATURE loves nothing solitary, and always reaches out to something as a support, which ever in the sincerest friend is most delightful.

—Cicero.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

SOME I remember, and will ne'er forget
My early friends, friends of my evil day;
Friends in my mirth, friends in my misery
too,

Friends given by God in mercy and in love;
My counsellors, my comforters, and guides;
My joy in grief, my second bliss in joy;
Companions of my young desires; in doubt
My oracles; my wings in high pursuit.

Oh, I remember, and will ne'er forget
Our meeting spots, our chosen sacred hours;

Our burning words that utter'd all the soul;

Our faces beaming with unearthly love;
Sorrow with sorrow sighing, hope with hope

Exulting, heart embracing heart entire.

—R. Pollok.

GOLD can be tried by fire and the goodwill of friends by time is tested.

—Menander.

MY friend, with thee to live alone,
Methinks were better than to own
A crown, a sceptre, and a throne.

—Anon.

FROM THE HEART OF A FRIEND

WHERE true love bestows its sweetness,
Where true friendship lays its hand,
Dwells all greatness, all completeness,
All the wealth of every land.

—Holland.

OCCASIONALLY the choicest companions are somewhat dull, especially when they are happy and at ease in each other's society.

—Arthur Helps.

FRIENDSHIP, of itself a holy tie,
Is made more sacred by adversity.

—Dryden.

I DO not wish to treat friendships daintily, but with roughest courage. When they are real, they are not glass threads or frostwork, but the solidest thing we know.

FRIENDSHIP, I fancy, means one heart between two.

—Meredith.
